A design review needs a decision boundary

Separate the evidence, recommendation and unresolved choice.

TASK AND EVIDENCE

Choose the plan with export

They open both plan pages to find the relevant limit.

→

PROPOSAL

Put limits side by side

Explain which gap the change addresses.

→

REVIEW QUESTION

Is the comparison sufficient?

Keep the discussion on the open choice.

State what this meeting can decide.

Example review: choose how a customer compares two subscription plans.

Pricing policy has already been approved. Plan names are still open for discussion.

OPEN DECISION

Comparison structure

The review can change how differences are presented.

FIXED CONSTRAINT

Approved plan rules

A different price needs another owner and a separate decision.

Show the evidence before the proposal.

Use the observed task and the condition behind the recommendation. A screen tour alone gives the room little basis for feedback.

REVIEW QUESTION

Is the comparison sufficient?

Keep the discussion on the open choice.

Sort feedback by what it changes.

Do not make evidence and preference compete as if they were the same kind of comment. Both can matter, for different reasons.

Feedback	Classify it	Next step
A customer cannot find the export limit.	Task evidence	Check the proposed comparison.
Legal needs the renewal condition visible.	Constraint	Resolve with the relevant owner.
The cards feel too heavy.	Visual judgement	Discuss hierarchy and the intended direction.
Perhaps customers prefer annual billing.	Assumption	Find evidence before changing the default.

Record the decision and the dissent.

A dissenting view is useful when it names a risk the next test can inspect. Keep it beside the decision.

Decision and reason

Which option did we choose, and why?

Unresolved risk

Which objection still needs evidence?

Owner and next check

Who will resolve it before the next commitment?
